

ABOUT US!

Founded in 1979 after in-house designers at several midwestern universities found the need to communicate and share ideas. AUID now exists as a non-profit and robust community of designers collectively working to shape the higher education environment by continuing to refine and adapt for different classroom pedagogies, office designs, and generational needs of staff, faculty, and students.

WHY ATTEND CONFERENCE?

CONNECT | Designing for higher education is distinct and requires a balance of reliable, tested and proven solutions. Attending conference creates opportunities for connecting with other campus designers, planners, and manufacturers via campus site visits and roundtables. Plus the design awards provides an occasion to celebrate members who submit projects in the annual design competition.

EXPLORE | Each year conference is held at a new institution (private or public) and hosted by AUID members. Attending conference allows members to explore and tour campus projects and facilities at peer institutions.

GAIN | AUID partners with manufacturers and vendors to host a showcase featuring new products, prototypes and solutions specific to higher education. The vendor showcase and campus tours allow members to gain first hand knowledge of proven solutions and products. Additionally, these manufacturers provide opportunities to earn continuing education units typically required for licensure.
